Hotel Danmark a lovely place to sit and eat from breakfast through to Night - just off Jomtien Beach Road

Flip the book to see Heiner Moessing keeping an eye out for excellent properties

HOTEL DANMARK

Kent is your host at Hotel Danmark and you couldn't be in better hands as he has worked in the Food and Drink industry for over 35 years even spending 14 years on cruise ships travelling between Denmark and the UK so of course his English is perfect. In fact he practically speaks every European language even teaching his wife a little Danish.

Which is useful as Hotel Danmark, Denmark or Danemark - depending on how your particular nationality likes to spell it, has a truly international clientele. Having been a well kept secret at the base of Soi Whitehouse just off Jomtien beach road for over 20 years now Americans, Canadians, Germans, Dutch and of course Scandinavians flock here for the excellent value breakfast buffet - there have even been a few curious Chinese diners.

Kent took over last year and immediately took command of their famous buffet breakfast tremendous value at only 190 baht. Served from 7:30 - 12:00 my advice is to come hungry as there really is such a great selection here you could quite easily call it brunch or lunch depending on the time you visit! Their secret? Well Kent is not frightened of an early morning alarm call and is up at 5 a.m. to ensure everything is fresh - nothing hanging over from the night before! Also his selection of staff and their training is essential he personally shows them how to prepare and serve "farang food" always on the lookout for friendly hard working staff who are prepared to look and listen. He instills in them the need to clean the tables as soon as there are plates to be cleared away and has also told them to be friendly and smile!

After breakfast there is lunch 1 request with a special menu 10 pm. Every Sunday there is "Flaeskesteg" which is extremely personally love the Danish blue cheese, Danish bread and which is fantastic being crisp, from the egg and bacon station.

until 3 sometimes by special and then dinner from 5 until a speciality dish of Danish pork popular and I have to say I produce he serves. The Danish unsurprisingly the bacon streaky and freshly prepared,

For lovers of Thai food 2 soups are always available and a choice of curries. Then for the sweet toothed: Danish pastries, some very lovely little cream filled desserts and a Danish speciality of rice and milk with Almond oil. Even the coffee is Scandinavian the pickles pate and extensive selection of jams all homemade and these include mango, strawberry, pineapple and raspberry.

Should you decide to eat al fresco there is a lovely breeze direct from the sea that is funnelled down Soi Whitehouse to cool you, whilst inside a large area with plenty of seating just perfect for groups and clubs. The Norwegian club meet here and just starting now a Danish club that will hold regular meetings at Hotel Danmark on Thursdays between 14:00- 16:00 the first one (31st May) having a representative from the Danish Embassy on hand to help with questions and problems.

Groups of golfers also enjoy holding their pre and post tournament meals at Hotel Danmark. Kent has even organised his own tournaments in November and then January. Attended by 40 players there was even a celebrity Norwegian sporting hero Bjørn Wirkola - Olympic Ski jumper who became the World Champion in 1966 winning both the large and normal hill competitions. Now in his 70s he still creates quite a stir when he visits and takes part in the golf although he wouldn't want to add the Hotel Danmark' Jumbo to his trophies as this is the "prize" for the player who finishes in last place !

Hotel Danmark certainly is a great place to visit - they already have bookings for Christmas as they are known to prepare traditional specialities when pre ordered but any day they are a great to try.

Hotel Danmark is on Soi White House, off Jomtien beach road (near soi 7)

Hi Everyone

“Breakfast like a king, lunch like a prince and dine like a pauper”

-now you can be setting yourself up for the day with a tremendous feed at Hotel Denmark's breakfast buffet. Or if it's a cheese feast you're after L'Auberge (our Dining in Detail feature) has just the Sunday buffet for you.

Also in this month's Trader we take a look at Hua Hin with three of our writers: taking a trip across to give us some feedback on the journey, what to see and even where to go fishing once you're there. Then there's plenty of excitement leading up to the World cup in our sports section with a run down on this month's games and our recommendation of IRovers if you're looking for a great place to catch them.

The feedback so far this year to our new look cover has been very favourable if you are interested in signing up to be a cover story for the month not only will you get the front + 2 inside pages laid out by our expert design department but views on Pattaya People TV, mentions on Kiss and 96 fm plus showings on our Website, Facebook pages and LED screens around town.

Enjoy!

COMING TO THE SMALL SCREEN

Glow season 2

GLOW stands for The Gorgeous Ladies of Wrestling and is a comedy series revolving around a fictionalization of characters and gimmicks from the 1980s. All the characters either loved or hated are back; "Zoya the Destroya", "Liberty Belle", "Junkchain" and "Shelia the She-Wolf" to name a few. Fans from the first season will also be desperate to know if rivals Ruth and Debbie can overcome their differences. Their struggle takes centre stage in this season. As season two also shows how the women of GLOW deal with their newfound fame and it's good, bad and sometimes ugly sides. Unsurprisingly there will be plenty of wrestling.

Luke cage season 2

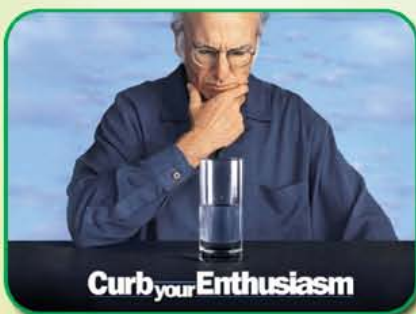

Hot on the heels of Jessica Jones continues Marvels TV campaign continuing their success on the big and small screen. Luke Cage the bullet proof man returns. Now a celebrity in Harlem New York and having cleared his name Cage has a whole new outlook on life. However it's not long until he has to face a new threat. In this season we explore the Characters in greater depth. Who is Luke Cage and how is Misty Knight after losing her arm and now having a mechanical one? Also more background on Mariah Dillard known as "Black Mariah" in the comics. Emotions are explored. Each of the seven episodes are named after a and CL Smooth song so look forward to a very exciting and very relevant and pop culture-heavy show

The Angel (Movie)

This new spy thriller exclusive for Netflix recreates the true story of a high ranking Egyptian official Ashraf Marwan, who was President Nasser's son-in-law and special adviser and confidant to his successor Anwar Sadat. We see how Ashraf becomes a spy for Israel against his home country. This Israeli production is directed by Ariel Vromen famous for his movie "the Iceman". Based on NYT bestselling book 'The Angel: The Egyptian Spy Who Saved Israel' by Uri Bar-Joseph.

Recommended Series; Curb your Enthusiasm.

Another winner from HBO who consistently give the world quality television shows. Prepare to laugh and sometimes cringe at the brilliantly worked out episodes from master comedian Larry David. David stars as a fictionalized version of himself a semi-retired writer and producer living in Los Angeles with his wife played by Cheryl Hines. Each episode has an outline and subplot written by David, allowing the actors to improvise the dialogue as they go. The plots focusing on the minutiae of everyday life, questioning and exploring social conventions and political correctness. There are also many instances of Larry arguing with the citizens he

David gets annoyed at the behaviour of those around him and likewise others find him annoying. Misunderstandings lead to many awkward situations with hilarious results. Critically acclaimed the show has been nominated for 38 primetime Emmy Awards and in 2002 a Golden Globe for best television series. There are nine seasons to catch up on, but I personally find the earlier seasons are the best.

A Weekend Jaunt to Hua Hin

At my age people sort of forget about birthdays but at heart I have always been a big kid. When I was young I was a complete nightmare, pestering my parents a good few months before the due date to try to find out what present I was going to get and putting forward outrageous suggestions (None of which ever materialised). So a couple of months ago I was already planning my birthday with my friends, where and what should we do to celebrate? This year everything fitted in perfectly, my birthday landed on a Saturday and many options were open.

It was over dinner that my three good Thai friends and I threw some suggestions into the proverbial party hat. First up was Koh Samui, but the flights were an outrageous price, then Siem Reap in Cambodia came up but was instantly dismissed for the same reason. Finally a road trip in Thailand seemed the best option but somewhere not too far so that we would not be spending all our time in the car. After much deliberation and one or two Leos later, the decision was made and Hua Hin was our chosen destination.

Now at this point I should tell you I do not drive, and last time I was driven to Hua Hin my friend decided to come off the toll road and negotiate Bangkok, which was an utter disaster and added hours to the journey. Thus, I nominated myself as navigator and I volunteered to sort out the route. I was also nominated to find accommodation and was given a budget not to exceed. Normally I tried to avoid organising things as you never get any thanks and usually I make a complete mess of things.

I immediately set to work on the accommodation and whilst surfing the normal hotel sites stumbled on a great deal at the Hua Hin Hilton Resort & Spa,. For some reason Agoda seemed to think I should benefit from discount vouchers, perhaps they knew it was my birthday? I felt really pleased with myself telling my friends all about the great hotel we would be staying at and droning on and on about all the first class amenities that it had. I had reverted back to my birthday mode and was one real great bore.

The day of my birthday finally came around and we all agreed to meet at my house at 7.30 am to get the most of the day. Being quite anally retentive I had studied maps, double checked Google maps, and restudied the maps again. The route was planned and written down in triplicate, in fact the only difficult part seemed to be getting around Bangkok. My Thai friends all have that lovable Thai trait of never quite being on time, so the jaunt actually finally got going a little late, just after 10 am! One of the great advantages of being the navigator is you get to travel in the front of the car, and also control the tunes.

We got as far as Thepprasit Road, two minutes from my house and our first stop was 7/11 for goodies to eat along the way. Back in the car for two minutes and the second stop was for petrol, then a good five minutes of driving on Sukhumvit Road and our third stop was to top up somebody's phone. I thought to myself that if this continued we would spend the weekend just trying to get out of Pattaya ! My three travel companions now seemed content, I heard the munching of seaweed from the back seat and the unmistakable ping of somebody's LINE messages coming through. I took the opportunity of programming in Google maps to the car's system and we were off to Bangkok on Highway 7.

Saturdays on Highway 7 everybody is heading towards Pattaya from Bangkok for a weekend by the seaside, so our progress was rapid going to the Thai Capital. Google maps was in control so I put Singular on the sound system and the birthday jaunt started in earnest. Spirits were high and there was a frantic discussion regarding what would be our first point of call when we reached Hua Hin. Suggestions varied from hitting the pool, to relaxing in the spa, my idea of getting a cold beer was widely accepted.

If you look at a map the journey from Pattaya to Hua Hin is a sort of horseshoe, from Pattaya you travel north via Chonburi, circle around Bangkok, then start heading south through Samut Songkhram, passing Phetchaburi and then on to Hua Hin, it looks perfectly simple unless you have me as navigator. I had made one colossal mistake, I had programmed the shortest route in Google maps and not the quickest. The mood in the car soon changed when all of a sudden we were in the middle of one of Bangkok's infamous traffic jams! If the idea of our weekend jaunt is tempting to any of our readers my advice is to stay on the Bangkok toll roads. It is well worth the 200 baht or so to circle the capital on the fast ring roads, do not be tempted under any circumstances to try the shortcuts.

It took just as long for us to get through the frustrating traffic in Bangkok than it had to reach the capital. My three travel companions were not amused and there was no conversation in the car whatsoever, I had been sent to whatever the Thai equivalent of Coventry is. However we were finally clear of traffic and on Highway 4 heading south, the journey was becoming more and more pleasant partly due to my companions talking to me again. The route takes you near the Tanintharyi National Park on the right with the Gulf of Thailand to the left. Great rock formations loomed in front, covered in luscious vegetation and the countryside all around was green and verdant. The small towns we passed were busy with Saturday life, and it was all a far cry from crowded Bangkok and Pattaya.

I had been to Hua Hin once before a few years ago and was amazed how clean everything was, you could almost eat your lunch off the pavement. And this time around nothing had changed, as you pass the Royal Palace and the large five star resorts there is a feeling of opulence and that somebody actually cares about the place. Glimpses of the ocean appeared through chinks between buildings as we turned off the main highway into Hua Hin itself and I smiled to myself as I saw that my companions in the car were all getting as excited as me in anticipation of what was to come.

Following the directions being narrated by the robotic Miss or Mrs Google we pulled into the sweeping driveway of the Hua Hin Hilton Resort & Spa and a man in a starched white suite and cap came running out blasting on his whistle to welcome our arrival. We had made it, and surprisingly with all our hiccups it was still only just after 3pm and a whole weekend of fun and frolics ahead to look forward to.

GAME RELEASES

Vampyr (Win,PS4,XBO)

Ever wondered what it would be like to be a Vampire? Vampyr out this month for PS4, PC and Xbox One, lets you know. Play as Doctor Jonathan Reid in this single player game. He's an interesting character, conflicted between Hippocratic Oath and a blood thirsty nature. Rumour has it that you don't need to kill in order to finish the game. However I did notice some very unsubtle evil characters offered up, making your moral choice much easier. Lots of story, dialogue choices and powers to explore in the streets of old London town.

Onrush.(PS4,XBO)

Moving quickly away from the dark horror to something more colourful and light hearted. Onrush gives you a real arcade style racing game that should be great fun for a multiplayer or single player session. Developed by Codemasters who have a long history of making great racing games like 'Dirt' etc. Boost around at high speed and pull off stunts whilst trying to slam into your rivals to take them out. Just for the consoles at the moment.

Jurassic World Evolution (PS4,XBO,Win)

With all the Sim games that have gone before like Sim City, Ceasar 3 etc, it was an obvious idea to apply this management concept to the World of Jurassic Park. Having watched the gameplay I can say that the team has done an amazing job. The island looks stunning with a high level of detail and authenticity. Along with possibly the best dinosaurs ever created for a game, not just in how they look but how they behave. Universal Pictures provided the developers with 3D models from the film. And the game's A.I determines how the 40 species will behave and interact. So as not to be a dry experience you meet Jeff Goldblum reprising his role and providing assistance.

Also there are other cameos from the films each representing their own departments. They push their own agendas, offering contracts that you can choose to complete. You are not only just managing everything you also get the opportunity to really get involved and roll up your sleeves! Join the maintenance team and ride in one of the jeeps whilst looking around the park. Of course it wouldn't be Jurassic park if there weren't emergencies to deal with. See if you can do better than John Hammond.

What's New at Sure Cell ?

The large grey building at the top of Soi 6 Pratumnak seems to be a rather exciting place of late. New signage is appearing new areas opening up and I've been told in a very "watch this space" way that there will be more changes to come. Expansion and development plans for the future look very interesting and once inside the clinic on floor 3 there are new faces as well.

Business is good, the reception area busy with a variety of patients of different nationalities and the appointment book full. Dr Peter Lewis still calls in to the clinic for a few days each month to hold free seminars and spread the word as well as looking after his own patients. However, when he was last available to chat he looked well, rested and pleased with the Pattaya venture in no small way due to the appointment of his two new doctors who between them are doing an exemplary job of looking after things while he is visiting the other international Sure Cell clinics.

Personifying all that's new and exciting at Sure Cell are the two new members of the team Dr Jimmy and Dr Wave.

Dr. Jimmy Suttipoj who graduated from China Medical University in 2015 with a Bachelor of Medicine and General Surgery has been practicing as a cosmetic and general physician in Pattaya. He is a trusted patient-focused, general practice doctor with experience in sport medicine and musculoskeletal disorders.

Also a very bright chap, In addition to medical practice, Dr Jimmy is also doing a Master of Science program in Anti-aging and Regenerative Medicine. Having seen the great results of the healing and regenerative properties of PRP since he has been at the practice Dr Jimmy has been excited to undertake further training with regards to its use in musculoskeletal indications and he relishes working in this new and exciting field of medicine.

Dr. Wave Wasinee also graduated from China Medical University with a degree of Bachelor of Medicine and General Surgery in 2015. For the past few years she has gained valuable work experiences in different hospitals around Asia and recently undertook special training in Australia in the field of Platelet Rich Plasma for both musculoskeletal and rejuvenating regenerative medicine with Dr Peter Lewis who rates her injection technique very highly.

Now at full time at the clinic in Pratumnak, Dr Wave practices in variety fields including general practice, anti-aging, regenerative medicine and aesthetic medicine. She has a strong interest in women's health through the use of Platelet Rich Plasma for both cosmetic rejuvenation purposes and also as a treatment for various gynecological conditions.

Both Doctors are also firmly signed up to Dr Lewis' mantra of treating patients in a holistic way addressing problems not only through treatments but also by looking at lifestyle, diet and all contributing factors. They are also very excited about the new developments coming and told me there are more treatments and innovative new procedures on the cards.....

More of that to be reported on later so keep watching this space at The Pattaya Trader for further updates.

The Grape Trail

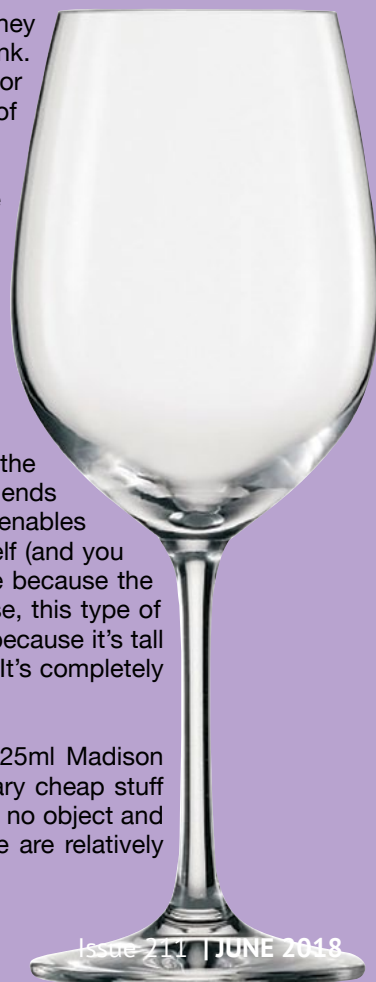

Do you need glasses?

On Sukhumvit Road in Bangkok, there used to be a rather classy restaurant where they gave you an enormous wine glass if you ordered anything grander than the house plonk. Honestly, they were absolutely massive and could have made a desirable residence for a small goldfish. They were extremely heavy too and I was always scared of dropping one of the wretched things and causing an unseemly commotion.

At a push, you could drink wine out of a plastic mug but you'd lose most of the aroma. Wine invariably tastes best out of a well-designed glass. Shape, comfort, size and transparency are the four main issues. Price too, so don't buy glasses that you can't afford to break, for break they will sooner or later. For table wine, a tulip-shaped glass is best, because it concentrates the aroma near the rim. It should be well-balanced, with a long thin stem which is comfortable to hold. And incidentally, we always hold glasses by the stem, not by the bowl. This prevents the wine from warming up too quickly. Go for clear, plain glasses because those frosted or opaque things are useless.

Now I happen to like big ones - and you can take that foolish smirk off your face, that boy in the back row. Never buy tiny wine glasses. "Neither use nor ornament," as one of my Yorkshire friends liked to say. You need to swirl the wine around in the glass to release the aroma. A big glass enables you to accomplish this without spilling the contents all over the table or worse, over yourself (and you might detect the voice of experience here). A capacity of 380-425ml is ideal for good wine because the glass should only be filled a third full anyway. If you tend to drink table wines and nothing else, this type of glass will be fine for everything. For sparkling wine, the so-called champagne flute is ideal because it's tall and thin. Forget that horrid traditional champagne glass that looks like a saucer on a stick. It's completely useless for wine, especially sparkling wine.

The Thai-made Ocean range of glasses are excellent value and easily available. Their 425ml Madison Red Wine Glass is a large and elegant and I always use these for wine tasting. For ordinary cheap stuff the inexpensive Ocean Classic Red Wine glass is fine, with a capacity of 230ml. If money is no object and you drink expensive wines, you might prefer the Austrian Riedel glasses. In contrast, here are relatively inexpensive wines (by today's standards) from Australia's Eden Valley wine district.

Bandicoot Estate Premium White, Australia (c. Bt. 650 @ various outlets)

In case you'd forgotten or possibly never knew, a bandicoot is a small rat-like nocturnal marsupial, covered in grayish-brown fur with a pointed nose and a long tail. From a distance it looks like a rabbit, except perhaps to another bandicoot. This wine is a lovely, bright gold with an aroma that gives the impression that the wine is rather more expensive than it actually is. The wine is made from Chardonnay, the most popular of all white grapes. Chardonnay can produce a wide range of aromas and sometimes there are distinct notes of green apples, celery or even cucumber. In this wine, tropical fruit dominates with nectarine, apricot and lemon up front. In the background there's an elusive hint of peppery lime. This is a light dry wine, not as dry as the proverbial bone but dry nonetheless. It has an attractive fresh, fruity taste with pleasing tang of acidity, which helps to give it a bit of shape and also adds another dimension to the taste. At 13.5% ABV this is a terrific little wine and tremendous value for money. It would make a splendid aperitif but would also make a good partner for light chicken or fish dishes.

Bandicoot Estate Premium Red, Australia (c. Bt. 650 @ various outlets)

This rich, dark red wine looks inviting. Get your snout into the glass (assuming that the glass is big enough) and you'll pick up a sweet jammy aroma of black fruit. The wine is made primarily from Shiraz, or Syrah as it's known in France. You might notice a background, dryer aroma too. I have to admit that I was expecting a hefty, beefy wine but to their credit, the winemakers have taken a more reserved approach. At 13.5% ABV there's plenty of dark fruit on the palate and just a mild touch of tannin to give a sense of firmness. As you'd expect, it's dry but the generous fruit helps to balance it out. The "finish" is the word used to describe the experience during the time the flavour lingers in the mouth after swallowing. Assuming the flavour is pleasing and satisfying; a long finish is generally considered a good thing and this wine has just that, which is unusual for a wine with this price tag. I've been reliably informed that it's one the house wines at the Hilton, so that should say enough. As to food, Shiraz is fairly versatile but it's the traditional partner for beef dishes. I tried it with one of my home-made spicy pizzas and it the combination worked perfectly.

You can try these excellent wines by bottle or glass (about Bt 120) at many Pattaya restaurants including Aroi Pub & Restaurant (Soi Talman), La Scala (Soi Rompho), Little Italy (Second Road) Grottino and Fusillo Restaurants (Naklua Rd) and Amber Restaurant (just off Theprasit Soi 8). I'd certainly recommend giving these pleasant wines a try, assuming that you haven't spent all your money on wine glasses.

FIRE AND STONE

PIZZERIA

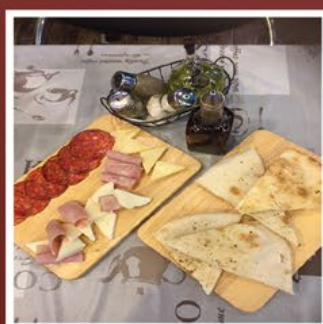

Since the last time we visited Fire and Stone there have been some changes and improvements. For example the addition of a smoothie/cocktail bar for those wishing to get some refreshment whilst waiting to pick up their pizza. The hatch direct from the kitchen to the outside street means that diners are not bothered by messenger bikes picking up deliveries and for customers waiting to collect their own pizzas they can now try out one of the fresh fruit smoothies or fabulous cocktails - but more of those later!

We were eating inside and availing ourselves of the very friendly and efficient service. First up the vegetable spring rolls with sweet plum sauce - piping hot so be careful with that first bite! Then some Antipasti a selection of Italian cold cuts and cheeses - great for sharing.

The signature Fire and Stone Pizza was accompanied by the signature salad The Insalata Fire and Stone had plenty of spicy,grilled chicken on top of the crunchy green salad with a delightful addition of truffle oil and the Fire and Stone pizza I was informed has this artistic design to represent the fire coming out of the stone and we added chilli oil to taste.

So what about those cocktails I hear you cry ? Well the frozen cocktails start from only 140 baht and were lovingly prepared by our two waitresses. Of the ten to choose from we opted for Passion Fruit Margarita and the Frozen Mexican "Hot" Chocolate that was an enticing blend of tequila,chocolate liquor,chocolate syrup and chocolate chips. These were so completely delicious that we thought stopping by just for a cocktail any time of the evening would be a good idea - or before the watershed for a fresh fruit smoothie that start at only 50 baht.

Fire and Stone is located right next door to Alibaba on Pattaya Klang open from 11 a.m. to 11 p.m. you can call them on 038 427 011 for reservations or deliveries.

DINING IN DETAIL - L'AUBERGE

I love a red and white checked tablecloth, it immediately puts me in mind of Parisian bistros and French cafes generally. So to see the pretty layout at L'Auberge was a great first impression quickly followed by a second great impression in the form of a sumptuous selection of produce laid out for their Sunday French cheese and cold cuts Buffet. If you want to be reassured about the quality of the food you are about to sample just go and cast your eyes over the display presented by the restaurant's owner Renault.

Although born in the Alsace region of France Renault has really been a world traveller throughout his life spending time in Switzerland Morocco Tunisia even Las Vegas in the USA working at a hotel there for six months before joining us here in Pattaya. He explained that many customers come to him to try his fantastic Couscous because it is so authentic and this of course he puts down to his time spent in Morocco where he learnt to make it properly. Also his attention to detail and passion for food is clear to see. When he prepares Beef Bourguignon for example, he imports the beef and the lamb he uses is La Belle Rouge direct from France. So the quality of the produce is sure to be seen and 3 course set meal looks incredibly interesting - but we were here on a Sunday and our mission was to eat cheese!

What is it about cheese? I have always preferred a cheeseboard at the end of the meal in preference to dessert but since coming to Pattaya have found that its scarcity and expense generally means cheese has become even more desirable. L'Auberge certainly had a marvellous selection accompanied by a delicious crisp crunchy salad, Tapenade Olive and fresh French bread. The cold cuts included salami Parma ham, Mortadella, there were wonderfully crunchy little pickle gherkins and cheese aplenty.

Renault is on hand to explain and introduce the different varieties. He told me that he likes to have the classics: Camembert, Brie etc. but each week introduces new cheeses because of course he has loyal fans of his Sunday buffet who will come to sample the new varieties such as Pecorino, Camembert with truffles, Blue Goats cheese, 18 month matured Parmesan, French Blue etc. etc.

French music completes the atmosphere, everything is spotlessly clean. There's even a helping of "Trou Normand" in this instance lemon sherbet with a delightful addition of a little vodka used to cleanse the pallet so that you can go ahead and eat more L'Auberge on Pratumnak Hill corner of Soi 4 is a great little restaurant to try any evening but especially on Sunday. A 96FM PATTAYA PEOPLE RADIO RE-SHUFFLE

Like the shuffling of a political party's cabinet, it's always good to freshen up a radio station's schedule to prevent any staleness that might be allowed to creep in. So for June, and the foreseeable future, the very popular Barry Upton will be continuing to entertain our masses in his own inimitable fashion with the sardonic and witty humour he has become known for over the past eight years while hosting his breakfast show 'Morning Glory', running from 8am to noon.

Guests galore plus amazing and funny stories from around the world are a big part of this extravaganza of fun to help get the day off to a great start. Then from midday until 2pm, Northern Soul and 60s enthusiast DJ Johnny P. will be manning the decks in the radio studio on the top floor of the Pattaya People Media Group building playing a mix of classic oldies with a touch of modern goodies. 'Let's Do Lunch' is the theme so grab a sandwich and enjoy.

Then come the changes with DJ D.M. otherwise known as Diana Mountanous, who hails from Las Vegas no less, giving us all a little 'Afternoon Delight' from 2 to 4pm.

The return of Barry Upton is next with a lot less chat and a lot more music as the sun gets ready to set and the streets get busy with many just starting out their day/night. The 'Sundowner' show, from 4 to 6pm is a great way to head into the evening as Pattaya comes alive with entertainment.

So, into the night schedule which sees Sarah Jayne (DJ S.J.) and Paul Rosenberg doing their best to impersonate owls by keeping their eyes wide open all night, delivering smooth, soft and, sometimes sexy, tones as the Pattaya nightlife gets into full swing.

There will, of course, be music for everyone of a discerning nature with many new additions from the current crop of hits emerging around the world and some extra yesteryear gems, some of which being rarities on radio. Word is the 'Mash Ups' currently on air are being received extremely well judging by the feedback the radio station is getting. They're invigorating and fresh with recognisable songs being given a new treatment...so exciting and worth checking out.

Whatever you might be doing, driving, cooking, relaxing by the pool, partying, Enjoy the vibrant and go-ahead dynamic sound of 'Sunshine Hits' on 96FM, Pattaya People Radio.....DIG IT.

When it comes to starting a healthy lifestyle, getting off the couch and being physically active is one of the most important things you need to do in order to remain healthy. Making a habit of regular exercise will help you to control your weight and strengthen your bones and muscles. Also, it is a great way to reduce your risk of cardiovascular disease, some cancers and type 2 diabetes. Furthermore, having an active lifestyle will also improve your mood, mobility, mental health and will increase your chances of living longer. General guidelines show that for adults, it is recommended that they should do at least 150 minutes of moderate-intensity physical activity every week. This will help achieve substantial health benefits. Increase this to 300 minutes for more extensive benefits.

First planning on where to start can be a bit of a difficult task. What do I eat? How many minutes should I workout for? What exercises are good for abs? There are plenty of resources online that are right at your fingertips and in this article we are going to provide you with a quick guide to starting your fitness journey!

Where To Begin?

You must remember that change doesn't happen overnight and it does involve a lot of dedication and hard work. But if you are ready to start living a healthier and happier life then there are a few steps you can incorporate.

1) Set A Goal - What are you looking to achieve? Take some time to understand what goal you are wanting to reach and write it down. It is best to set some short term and long term goals which help you break it down to the final hurdle.

2) Have A Plan - You should have a plan as to when you will workout throughout the week and also what to stock in your pantry. Having a plan is a great way to map out your meal and exercise plans throughout the week. It should help you be more organised and less stressed when trying to understand what to eat for lunch on Tuesday or what to train this evening.

3) Find A Buddy/Friend - Having a friend who is interested in working out and eating healthily is another step towards making your lifestyle change more sustainable. It will ensure that your workouts are a little more fun when training with a friend and they can assist you in the gym too. Your friend can also help with food choices too, and can help you say 'no' to that chocolate cake in the shop window.

How Can Pattaya Sport Help?

If you make your way to pattayasport.com, you can find a directory of local gyms and fitness centres in Pattaya. From here you can view the venues that are closest to you or that have the equipment and amenities that you want from a gym. Also if you need a few guides on exercises and diet plans then we would suggest making your way to bodybuilding.com. Here they have some great articles from their own trainers who can help you better plan your routine.

PATTAYA PEOPLE TELEVISION – A FEAST OF ENTERTAINMENT

The only English speaking 24 hour a day channel, Pattaya People Television is continuing to entertain and inform the Ex Pat community of Pattaya plus many Thai locals who are known to regularly choose this mainly English speaking channel.

Coming up this month are new features on a Pattaya treasure known as Foodland plus Linda's Restaurant and a very special Chaine des Rotisseurs event at the Dusit Thani which shows how food can be artistically presented as well as being very tasty, all provided by enthusiastic young Chef Pathma who has gained experience cooking all over the world, including for international royalty.

PPTV has a policy to try to entertain as much as possible whilst being informative about issues concerning Expats in Pattaya. The weekly 'Pattaya Expats Club' feature is always a case in point and the, sometimes vital tips can be invaluable. Also the weekly updated 'Events & Gig Guide' presented by Barry Upton & Paul Rosenberg, will go some way to suggesting things to see, do or experience in and around the town.

If you know of an event that you'd like to see listed in the show, then contact Pattaya People's offices or e-mail info@pattayapeople.com.

In production right now is an updated series of Yoga Poses Of The Day with Diana Montanous showing us all how to stretch, breath and relax our bodies with a program of simple but effective moves. As we grow older, yoga is a fantastic way to keep body shape and suppleness, so these features filmed at Zen are vital to health and important to watch.

Big sponsors 'Mixx nightclub' and 'Club Insomnia' are always well featured with their infomercials brightening up the daily output.

Also, look out for 'Pattaya Trader' chief editor Gloria Jones who regularly gives her take on the features which go into the current issue.

Finally, the cinema previews are always worth a watch to see what will be showing at Pattaya's excellent cinemas.

Available on Sophon cable around the clock and online at the 'Pattaya People' website - www.pattayapeople.com

The moon in June will be a full one soon...so stay in tune with a silver spoon and a toy balloon. Pattaya People TV – ESSENTIAL.

Panwa Boonak crowned 2018 Thailand Optimist National Championship

Champion for two consecutive years, a feat achieved only by a handful of others

One-hundred-and-thirty-one Optimist dinghies competed at the 2018 Top of the Gulf Regatta in Pattaya, all vying for top honours in the Thailand Optimist National Championships, and the three-day competition was fierce, with reigning champion Panwa Boonak (THA) looking to hold off strong challenges from fellow Thai juniors and many of the best young sailors from around Asia.

Thailand's premier youth sailing event, the Thailand Optimist National Championships was first launched in 1976 as the Optimist Thailand Championship Cup, and has been held annually since regularly attracting more than 100 sailors each time. Now, more than 40 years since its first sailing, it remains as competitive as ever and is Thailand's second oldest annual sailing trophy, the oldest being the Vega Rudder Trophy donated by His Majesty the late King Bhumibol Adulyadej.

The Thailand Optimist National Championships is held as an integral part of the Top of the Gulf Regatta, organised by the Junior Sailing Squadron of Thailand and the Yacht Racing Association of Thailand, and in Thailand is often a gauge of a young sailors prowess and a qualifying event for a regional games.

Having been split into two fleets prior to the first race this year, defending champion Panwa Boonak was in the Gold Fleet and was determined to be one of only a handful of juniors to ever defend the title. A fourth in the first race was a solid start, and he built on that with a first in the second race.

Squalls upto 25 knots and thunder and lightening, while periods when the fleet was becalmed, made the three-day event exceptionally challenging and only one race was completed on Day 2. In that race Panwa managed to secure a bullet and set himself up well for a final day showdown.

Hong Kong's Duncan Gregor had a strong start to the series and sat in second place at the end of the first day, but a string of below par performances thereafter saw him to drop and finish fifth overall, one place above another Hong Kong sailor, Casey Law.

As the conditions continued to be tricky, local experience came to the fore and M.L Weka Bhanubandh worked his way up the fleet. A second in Race 3 and third in Race 4 helped him to finish in second place overall and be crowned the top Under 12 sailor. Other fast finishers included Patihan Vorrasart (THA) who placed third overall and Chalisa Krittanai who was one place back in fourth and the top female sailor.

The three days, however, belonged to Panwa Boonak. Never flinching under the pressure a 4,1,1,1,1 scoreline saw him defend his title comfortably and be crowned 2018 Thailand Optimist National Champion at the final prize-giving held at Ocean Marina Yacht Club.

In the Silver Fleet the top three places went to Yoth Srimanchanda (THA), Attasuk Boontawee (THA) and Kritphet Suwannarai (THA), respectively.

OCEAN MARINA'S GALA DINNER FOR THE TOP OF THE GULF REGATTA 2018

Pattaya Trader were delighted to attend the Gala Dinner at the end of what had been a somewhat soggy regatta this year. However it stayed dry for the celebratory evening and certainly spirits were not dampened as all the participants appeared to have really enjoyed taking part in the Championship.

Barry Upton was on hand to provide entertainment, a sumptuous buffet was laid on and there were a host of dignitaries in attendance. These included the former mayor of Pattaya Khun Ittipol Khunpluem recently appointed to the Ministry of Tourism and Sports by Gen. Prayut in the role of Deputy Minister of Tourism.

Out and About is more than just “Hua Hin”

There is no need to convince the millions and avid outdoors men and women, who get excited by reeling in a 30-pound catfish in Thailand or seeing a beautiful brown trout rise to a fly on the Blackwater Co Cork, why they need to start making plans to head outside. But if for some reason, you need a little convincing, I have compiled a list of 10 good examples that might just offer you an excuse to call in sick to work or leave/take the ones you care about, for another weekend ...so you too can spend a day fishing.

1. Contribute to Conservation: Anglers put their money where their mouth is and are passionate about the environment. By purchasing fishing licenses (Not an issue in Thailand) and paying special taxes that they themselves have agreed upon anglers have helped to fund many of the wildlife and conservation programs that exist in Europe and beyond. They also contribute to non-game and education programs, and to the purchase of thousands of acres of public lands, where everyone is welcome to recreate year round. Anglers are also acutely aware of the importance of clean water and air and pride themselves on protecting and preserving our environment, natural communities, and valuable habitat.

2. Stress Relief: Ask most anglers why they enjoy spending time in the outdoors and you're likely to hear the word “freedom.” Spending a day afield casting for trout on a cool mountain stream or ledgering for catfish on a Thai lake, helps to release us from our highly stressful, everyday environment. Nothing brings on the sense of being alive and helps to rebuild our personal reserves like a day spent interacting with nature

3. Social Bonding: Sharing a fishing experience helps strengthen relationships with family and friends. It also offers a person the chance to give back to society through mentoring others in the pleasure and importance of being good stewards of our natural resources.

4. Supports Wildlife and Fisheries Management: Angling is an important wildlife management tool. For more than 100 years anglers have helped to contribute to wildlife and fisheries management efforts by helping to set seasons and creel limits. Wildlife populations of most fish species remain stable and in some cases flourish, a far cry from a decade ago when many species suffered from over harvest and the ill effects of pollution. Anglers also have a vested interest in and support many efforts to preserve and protect all species and the environment-all the while helping to increase biodiversity.

5. Health Benefits: A high percent of western individuals are overweight. Being outside and being active helps to make you feel better and encourages a healthier way of life. Driving to your local sports bar or local fast food falang restaurant might be convenient, but fishing can also help you burn those unwanted calories, increase the quality of your lifestyle, and add years to your life.

6. Recreation: Having a bad day of fishing still beats a day at work or sitting in a Thai bar watching life pass. The most common reason you will find with people who like to fish is that it is simply fun, Getting out and about with a cool beer in the box and anticipating that the next 5 minutes will hook you the world record.

7. Self-Fulfilment: Fishing offers you the chance to improve your self-esteem through respect for the environment, mastering outdoor skills and achieving personal goals. Fishing can also play an important role in one's personal and social development. Fishing is a lifetime skill and activity that can be enjoyed at any age. Just ask a youngster who reeled in their first fish how much fun fishing can be.

8. Boost to the Economy: Anglers generate revenue for business in Thailand and directly support jobs that give an economic boost that any local community would be pleased with.

9. Fishing for Food: Wild fish are low in fat and cholesterol and high in protein. In fact, Heart Associations recommend a regular diet of fish. Besides it's a lot more challenging to catch that plate of fresh fish than to stroll endlessly down a TOPS aisle if you decide to keep your catch.

10. The Thrill: Fishing has a way of fulfilling an age-old need of pursuing and catching. The thrill lies in the challenge, such as stalking an elusive fish. But there are many who will be quick to profess that it's not the catching of fish that's important, but the immeasurable life lessons that you will experience along the way.

So if you are heading to Hua Hin on a break or you live there.... then check out these venues and have a great day

I-Rovers - World Cup 2018 Central in Pattaya

June will see sports fans going "Football crazy" with the start of the FIFA 2018 World cup on the 14th June. To be sure to catch all the action you really should get yourself to Pattaya's World Cup Central I Rovers, who will be showing every game live. right through to the finals on the 15th July.

Hosted this year by Russia this is the first ever World Cup to be held in Eastern Europe. Of the thirty-two nations qualified to play twenty countries competed at the previous edition of the tournament in 2014. Iceland and Panama have qualified for the first time, Iceland being the smallest country (in terms of population) to have ever reached the World Cup. Egypt, return to the finals after a 28-year absence and Peru return after a 36-year absence (since 1982);

Amazingly, 4 times champions Italy failed to qualify (for the first time since 1958) and neither did three-time runner-up The Netherlands. However European interest will be served by defending champions of the 2014 games Germany who will of course be there.

Russia will play the opening match at the Luzhniki Stadium Moscow on the 14 June against Saudi Arabia. I Rovers have 21 large HD TVs so there will be plenty of room to catch all the action and for fans of other sports don't forget all major sporting events are available to view at this great Sports Bar. If you don't see what you want just ask one of the friendly members of the I Rovers team who will be happy to make sure your chosen sport is shown as well as supplying you with some delicious food as well.

From early in the morning with the famous gut busting breakfast to a wide variety of Western and Thai dishes throughout the day. Look out for the daily specials such as Indian Curry on Mondays, Spaghetti for Tuesday, Burgers on Wednesday, Meatballs Thursday and Fish and Chips on Friday. Then you can always accompany your food and sports entertainment with a great Bucket of Beers for only 195 baht. See you at I Rovers !

Matches you may want to look out for include: the first appearance of Ronaldo's Portugal against the well fancied Spain on the 15th then on the 16th we have the talented France side v Australia and also the first appearance of Lionel Messi and company against Iceland.

The 17th sees the opening matches for both defending champions Germany and Brazil both of whom are heavily fancied to lift this year's World Cup. Then on the 18th we have the first appearance of Gareth Southgate's new look England side who open their campaign against Tunisia. With the group stages seeded as they are it would be a major shock if any of the most fancied teams did not qualify for the latter stages. This means the likes of Spain, Portugal, France, Argentina, Brazil and Germany will all expect to progress and with dangerous outsiders such as Uruguay, Croatia, Belgium and dare we say it England this could hopefully be one of the most entertaining and enthralling World cups of recent times.

At Last, a Ferry to the Sunny Side

For decades, folks in both Pattaya and Hua Hin have looked across the Gulf of Thailand and wished they could leap to the other side, Superman-style, in a single bound.

The straight-line distance between the two resort cities is just over one hundred kilometres but by land it's a grinding, 350km drive via the grand snarl auto of Bangkok and Co, which takes up to five hours. The two towns were like lovers stuck on opposite sides of a river with no way to get across. And now they can. A new, direct ferry service across the Gulf that launched in January 2017 has not only survived but thrived.

The Royal ferry is a sleek, high-speed catamaran that edges out of Pattaya's Bali Hai Pier at ten o'clock on the dot each morning to then scoot across the Gulf. Two hours later it docks just south of Hua Hin at Khao Takiap, and later departs for Pattaya at one pm.

Hua Hin is the most popular tourist destination in Prachuap Khiri Khan province. Being home to a royal holiday palace, it has retained the sense of decorum that Pattaya never really bothered about. Instead of bar-hoppers and jet-skis, you're more likely to find golfers (and then more golfers), with this region being home to ten world-class courses. The town's long, shallow beaches are generally free of deckchair slums and banzai speedboats, and come evening, you can max-out on eating and shopping at night markets. The most authentic one is still the original, midtown melee on Soi 72. But, you might protest, Pattaya has the same tourist trinket-trash markets, plus golf courses galore and beaches, so why pay the ferryman to go see same-same? Because, having briefly box-ticked Hua Hin's options, you then get to run yourself out of town on a rail. Head to Hua Hin's historic railway station and hop a train south to the real Prachuap, a land of plenty minus the resort sprawl and shout-fest tour groups.

Like it's full name, Prachuap is a long and lyrical sort of province. Exploring its beaches that loop from headland to headland you find sea pines and fishing boats instead of hawkers and high-rise. Take Baan Grood for instance, 100 km south of Hua Hin. This snoozy seaside town — more like a large village — is also known as Ban Krood, Ban Good, Ban-Kood, Bangrut and other variations. (My preferred version, as used on the railway timetable, is Ban Krut, meaning "bankrupt" in Indonesian.) You'll see few farang here except for a handful of defrosting Scandinavians who pass the day in leisurely cycling or beach basking like bronzed whales.

Rolf, a Norwegian longtime retired in Thailand, tells me he has retreated here to escape the intensity of once-tranquil Hua Hin where he first settled. "And the temperature here today is 30 degrees Celsius while it's ten below in Oslo, so I am 40 degrees better off."

An endless beach stretches south from Baan Grood with low-rise bungalow resorts lining its parallel seafront road. Cycling the grand corridor of palms and sea pines that shade the beach for miles is my morning heart-starter. I stop anywhere and swim in the windless sea, and then cruise back to the resort for breakfast.

It might be an Accor-free coast but this "sunny side of the Gulf" (as it is known) is in fact a favourite of in-the-know Thai families. Thus the numerous bungalow resorts. The absence of a convenient local airport is a contributing "plus" to the tranquility of life here — a place in the sun that you have to earn.

So, what's there to do in Baan Grood? Visit a temple, swim, sun-bake, read, grab a massage and dine at the little thatched restaurants along the sand. Cycle and repeat cycle. Like visiting Casablanca for the waters, if you're here for the neon stars and jangle bars, you've been misinformed.

Another 65 km further south down the line, just off Bang Saphan Noi, sits equally-unsung Koh Talu. The hilly, jungle-clad island is privately owned although a large part is slated to become national park. The sole resort has comfortable, Thai-style bungalows overlooking the white sand arc of Big Bay and the smaller, absurdly pretty Pearl Bay. Meals at its restaurant happen languidly to the sound of waves lapping beneath the wooden deck.

A list of might-do's (as opposed to must-do's) on this the 1500-ha, whale-shaped island includes snorkel, bushwalk, read, kayak, snooze, email. Again, repeat cycle. For variety I check out the hawksbill turtle hatchery along the beach, try squid fishing at sunset and join in with the resort's coral reef replenishment project. And then I must ask, "Do I really have to leave tomorrow?" I console myself with a farewell massage at dusk. The masseuse interrupts her vigorous pummelling (well, I asked for it) to say, "Look. Batman over the beach." Huh? I think — we're ten kilometres offshore on a superhero-free coast.

"Batman?" I ask.

"Yes, Batmans, many small ones. See," she insists.

I look up to see a dark, shadowy wave rising above the island ridge. It is the nightly exodus from Koh Talu's caves of hundreds of thousands of bats — batmans — going out I suppose to party all night and fight crime?

Getting there

The air-conditioned Royal ferry has 346 reserved seats, including 44 upstairs in business class. Purchase a seat (your passport or Thai ID is mandatory) for 1250 baht (economy) or 1500 baht (business) and check-in one hour before departure. www.royalferrygroup.com

Obtaining a Work Permit

A foreigner can apply for a work permit if he holds a non-immigrant visa or resident visa and his chosen occupation is not prohibited to foreigners. Also if he has an employer who can provide pertinent documents and be able to meet the cap of paid-up capitalization. If you are a foreigner who intentions to work in Thailand, you have to make sure that your intended job and skills do not belong to the categories generally closed for Thai nationals only.

Steps to securing a Work Permit

Step 1: Securing a Non-Immigrant Visa

To be granted with a non-immigrant visa, you are required to present the following:

- An offer of employment from a Thai company. If you are offered a job in the Kingdom, you ought to present the invitation and or recommendation letter of your would be employers in Thailand. Or you may be planning to start a company to employ yourself.
- A request from the company that you be given a non-immigrant visa that will allow the company to apply for a work permit for you.
- The company can attest that you are dependable, upstanding, law abiding and guarantees that you will respect the laws and customs of the nation.

Also, you must apply for a nonimmigrant visa at least 30 days prior to departure for Thailand. The consulate or consular office will ask for copies of the registration documents and financial statements of the company. These documents should be issued by the company.

If granted, you are allowed to have a temporary stay in Thailand for a period of 90 days only.

Step 2: Obtaining the Work Permit

The following are the documents that you must present:

1. Passport copies with every page signed by you
2. Non-immigrant visa card
3. Departure Card TM. 6
4. Scholastic records (certified copies)
5. Transcript of Records (certified copies)

6. Certificates or licenses of the applicant (certified copies)
7. Curriculum Vitae or Resume that has detailed description of your previous employment, position, duties, performance and length and place of employment.
8. 3 recent photos (within 6 months of application) 5x6 centimeters in size, full face and wearing business attire.
9. Marriage certificate if you are married to a Thai national (certified and original copies). Must also include your Thai spouse's ID card, birth certificates of children (if any) and household registration.

The Thai government may require you to have these documents to be certified by your country's embassy. Also, a translation from the foreign language to the Thai language may be required.

Documents that the employer provides:

1. Commercial Registration Department Certificate that shows the company to be duly registered as a juristic entity and bearing the name of the Managing Director and/or Director, its objectives and registered capital.
2. A Commercial Registration Department certified Shareholder's List.
3. A Factory Department, Ministry of Industry issued Factory License (if required).
4. VAT Certificate – Phor Phor 20
5. Withholding Tax – Phor Ngor Dor 1 (if renewing the work permit)

All these documents should have a seal of the company stamped on every page, true and authorized signature(s) of the Managing Director and/or Directors next to the seal. These will be required by the government officials who will examine the application.

The approval of the work permit does not rely heavily on the documents to be submitted alone. The deciding factor is usually the job description. Your job description must contain a detailed description of the required skills of your line of work, skills that Thai nationals are not likely to have.

You and your employer must justify why the Thai government must give you a working visa. Once your application for a work permit is approved, you will be allowed to work in the same company and location. If you transfer to another employer or location, you need to obtain a new application for work permit. You are not allowed to work in a different job from the one you were given a work permit for. You are also not allowed to work with a different employer from the one stated in your application. This will require you to return your work permit to the Labor Department. You have to do so in order for you apply for another work permit with another company.

Step 3: The Tax ID card

When your work permit is being processed, your company is supposed to apply a Thai taxpayer identification card for you at the Thailand Revenue Department. On that card is a Tax ID number that you will use in filling up tax documents.

Step 4: Obtaining the Re-entry Permit

- Visa – is issued outside of Thailand by a Thai embassy or consulate. This gives you access to enter the country. Once in the Kingdom, an immigration officer will stamp a date on your passport called “extension of stay.”
- Extension of Stay – is the time period in which you are allowed to stay in Thailand. This is stamped by the immigration officer at the border checkpoint upon arrival or by the immigration police after a request for extension of stay.

Misunderstanding the difference between the extension of stay and the re-entry permit may lead to certain consequences.

The extension of stay stamp is the controlling date. Meaning, your length of stay is dependent on the said date. Your work permit and re-entry permit is dependent on the extension of stay date.

However, if you leave Thailand without a re-entry permit, both your extension of stay and work permit will be cancelled.

Step 5: Renewing Your Visa and Work Permit

You have to renew your length of stay in Thailand first before you can renew your work permit. You may do this while still in Thailand or you may do it abroad and apply at the Thai Embassy or Consulate in another country.

If you are required to exit Thailand first before you can renew your work permit, you will need to furnish the Thai Embassy or Consulate with copies of your work permit, a new recommendation letter from your company, the company's registration documents, financial and tax reports.

If you have a long term extension of stay, you are required to report to the Thai immigration Police every 90 days. For multiple visa holders, they can simply cross border to another country and come back to Thailand to renew their extension of stay.

Divorce in Thailand

By Magna Carta Law Office

Not all marriages are meant to last. If you and your partner are currently on the verge of ending your relationship through divorce, it is necessary to contemplate on your possible divorce options because everybody knows that breaking up is never simple especially if you have finances and children that you need to consider. In Thailand, divorce is classified into 2 types:

UNCONTESTED DIVORCE

Uncontested divorce is the termination of marriage by mutual consent. The procedure is typically faster and cheaper as there is no need for a representation in court while preserving both parties' privacy. There is less emotional stress involved to both parties, as well as to their children and respective families as it enables the couple to end their marriage in a civilized manner.

Uncontested divorce is possible only if the couple has no disagreements over children or property. There is no need to have a ground for divorce. The couple's mutual decision to end the marriage is enough. A settlement or divorce agreement should contain provisions regarding the terms of sharing of assets, child custody and support, alimony, and other important matters. In the absence of such agreement, the matter shall be decided by the Court. It is recommended that you decide these matters beforehand and formalize them in a divorce contract. This will guarantee that there are no disagreements before you go to the registrar's office. The details of the divorce conditions shall be specified in the divorce registration.

CONTESTED DIVORCE

Contested divorce is when either spouse does not agree with the terms of the separation or has broken the marriage agreement.

This type of divorce allows one party to seek the court's help in dissolving the marriage subject to the existence of one of the grounds prescribed under Thai law.

GROUND'S FOR DIVORCE

- One spouse has committed adultery
- One spouse is guilty of misconduct
- One spouse has seriously harmed or tortured the body or mind of the other
- One spouse has deserted the other for more than 1 year
- One spouse has been imprisoned for more than 1 year
- The spouses have voluntarily lived separately for more than 3 years
- One spouse has disappeared for more than 3 years
- One spouse has failed to give proper maintenance and support to the other
- One spouse has been an insane person for more than 3 years continuously and such insanity is hardly curable so that the continuance of marriage cannot be expected
- One spouse has broken a bond of good behaviour
- One spouse is suffering from a communicable and dangerous incurable disease and may cause injury to the other
- One spouse has a physical disadvantage so as to be permanently unable to cohabit as husband and wife

While a couple may agree to divorce, things could become complicated and can be contested when it comes to some important conjugal matters such as child custody and sharing of properties. Unlike uncontested divorce, you lose control of the divorce process once a judge becomes involved. The judge may come up with an arrangement that neither of you will be comfortable with. He may also come up with a property settlement where you lose things that were more valuable to you.

BOSS OF THE HOUSEHOLD BUDGET.

Consider this a promotion. From now on, you are more than a humble household money manager a bill payer and a check writer. Instead, you are the chief financial officer of your household. You're the CFO of your finances, the C-suite executive of your personal capital. No corner office is required,

Your new role as household CFO will require some financial skills and a long view of your family's finances, experts say. "The CFO is the driver, the one who has concerns about the long term," says Kelly Graves, a certified financial planner and partner at Carroll Financial Associates in Charlotte, North Carolina. "That includes looking at estate planning, retirement planning, looking at the investment portfolio, education for children or grandchildren and all types of insurance," Graves adds. If this sounds intimidating, don't despair. The job isn't as difficult as you think it is, says Shashi Shah, a certified financial planner and director at SFMG Wealth Advisors in Plano, Texas.

What is required is the taking of stock of your budget for housing, debt, luxuries and other spending categories, then determining whether you need to reconsider your spending. "If you're in a situation where your cash flow is negative ... just stop the bleeding," says Eric Dossal, certified financial planner and advisor-vice president at Sontag Advisory in New York City. "Restructure the debt to where you get on a payment [plan] where you're cash-flow positive." Don't forget to automate any savings, debt payments and other important bills, experts say.

Have a long-term plan. An effective CFO looks beyond day-to-day spending to achieve long-term financial goals. As household CFO, you should strive to do the same thing. "Put short-term finances in a long-term picture," says Lili Vasileff, a Greenwich, Connecticut-based fee-only certified financial planner and author of "Money & Divorce: The Essential Roadmap to Mastering Financial Decisions." Vasileff, who routinely works with women going through the divorce process, says her clients often see themselves as the bill payers and the budget makers, but they haven't felt empowered to look beyond short-term planning. Taking that long-term view, which includes everything from retirement planning to building an emergency fund, is what makes a good household CFO, she says. "The game plan is what counts," Vasileff says.

Know how to delegate. Successful CFOs know that there may be people who are better suited for a specific task than they are. If you're struggling with an element of your financial plan, don't be afraid to outsource the assignment. That might mean delegating tax-planning steps to a CPA or enrolled agent, which is a tax professional who can represent clients before the IRS. It could also involve visiting a financial advisor or investment advisor to come up with plans to control cash flow, investment decisions and retirement planning. When clients visit Shah at his firm, "we [often] end up being their CFOs for them," he says.

Knowing when to delegate may even mean transferring certain responsibilities to your spouse as co-CFO in order to manage your finances together. "A CFO does not work in a vacuum," Shah says. "Usually, [he or she] has a team."

Schedule a board meeting. Talking about money isn't fun, but top-rate CFOs don't hide from hard conversations. Instead, they schedule regular meetings with their peers and underlings to ensure that everyone is up-to-date on the latest financial developments and money goals. When you have family discussions, treat them like a board meeting, Dostal says. You might schedule them quarterly or biannually – they don't have to be every month – but you should set time aside, outside of regular dinner conversation, to talk about your shared finances. In fact, this might be a conversation you plan to have in front of your financial advisor. And you should come prepared with printouts or at least an understanding of where you stand when it comes to saving, retirement planning, insurance needs and other financial essentials.

Award bonuses. Being household CFO is a tough job, but there are some perks, too. One benefit is that you can treat yourself when you do something right. "Set up a 'reward' or 'bonus program' if you've succeeded at your goals,"

2014 Honda Cbr600 For Infor Whatsapp Us At +971557414952

2015 Honda CBR600, in more euphoric economic times, the 600-class sport bikes were getting significant upgrades every two years. But consumer tastes have shifted away from the race replicas and both manufacturers and buyers are more cautious these days. The pace of innovation has slowed, but that doesn't mean the bikes are slow. Today's test case is the Honda CBR600RR. CBRs have been a benchmark since the 600 class was invented. So, how does the 2015 version measure up? Contact us for more info at +971557414952

New 2 Tb External Portable Hard Drives

I have some brand new, unopened 2 TB external portable hard drives that I never used. These all have fast USB3 data transfer by plugging it into your USB port, complete with the USB3 cable. These come already pre formatted for Windows, but all can be easily reformatted for Mac. The one Western Digital I have is already formatted for Mac. The Seagate drives are Windows, and the Blackweb Drives are also Windows. 2500 Baht price is firm, and I can guarantee they will work for you. Can deliver in the Pattaya general area and help you set it up if you wish, just send me an email or call 06 1380 4988. For some reason, this system thinks I have an invalid phone number.

Pattaya police to get tough on tourist vehicle rentals.

From now on Pattaya police have said that any tourist caught driving a rental vehicle without a licence will be fined up to 1000 baht. Also that the vehicle in question will be confiscated and the company that has rented said vehicle must pay another fine of up to 2000 baht when they go to collect it.

Police Major Arut Saphanon said that the reason for the change is because many tourists don't know the highway code and have not had any training which leads to accidents. Also that foreigners who commit crimes in Pattaya have been seen fleeing the scene of the crime in rented vehicles.

Tourists now need to produce an international licence, their home country driving licence and a passport when renting. They also need to carry these document to show the police if stopped - failure to do so will result in the vehicle being taken away. Expats can take their home country licence and a certified copy from their consulate or embassy in Thailand to the Department of Land Transport and get a Thai licence.
